ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The book's origins were at a conference entitled Reformation Theology: Reception and Transformation, that took place in August 2009 at Aarhus University. The conference was the culmination of a two-year project that was led and organized by Bo Kristian Holm and financed by The Danish Research Council for the Humanities. We are grateful to The Danish Research Council for the Humanities for laying the financial foundation of the project's two initial years and for its subsequent support of the conference. Together with a generous donation from the Aarhus University Research Foundation, it was possible to invite a large group of renowned theologians to participate in discussions of contemporary Reformation theology. We deeply appreciate the constructive atmosphere created by the speakers and participants at the conference. We also take this opportunity to thank the other co-organizers of the original conference, Else Marie Wiberg Pedersen, Niels Henrik Gregersen, and Peter Widmann, as well as the conference assistant, Bo Bergholt Grymer.

The current book reflects a reorientation of the conference's original aim and organization. Our goal for the book was to distinguish the historical transformations of Luther's thought that are indebted to developments in German theology from the recent global developments in Luther's theology that bring his thought into engagement with ethics, political thought, philosophy, feminism, and cultural studies. We are grateful to all the people who participated in the making of this transatlantic undertaking, beginning with the authors who contributed articles to this book. We are grateful to the Aarhus University Research Foundation for the financial support of the book. We thank Candace Kohli-Johnson, Marlene Jessen, and the staff at EVA-Leipzig who worked with us to edit, format, proof-read, and type-set the book. We also owe words of thanks to Klaus Fitschen, Wolfram Kinzig, and Volker Leppin, the editors of the series Arbeiten zur Kirchen- und Theologiegeschichte for kindly agreeing to publish this volume, and particularly to Dr. Annette Weidhas of the Evangelische Verlagsanstalt Leipzig for her enthusiastic support of this bilingual volume.
